Peace, However, Seems Probable Today, Although Nothing Definite Is Done.

VIOLENCE ON STREETS CONTINUES

Judge Grosscup Gives A Stay In Proceedings, And Indictments Are Asked For Strike Leaders

Arrest.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE] Chicago, Ill., June 5.—Hope of peace in the teamsters' strike was revived today although the Saturday conference brought no results and Attorney Mayer asserted his clients, the employers, would decline further consultation with the strike leaders tending to a settlement. It is believed that the labor circles are approaching an end.

Give a Stay.

Attorneys for the Employers' association today filed affidavits alleging violation of the federal strike injunctions and asking for the arrest of twenty union teamsters, among them being Daniel Corrigan, accused of assaulting Strikebreaker Curry. It is expected the recent rioting will lead to a hundred or more arrests for contempt.

Strike May Spread.

The principal fear expressed was that a spread of the strike to the 8,000 truck drivers employed by the Team Owners' Association might result from the dispute between the teamsters and the owners, which is approaching a climax.

From St. Louis came the report that Mr. Gompers, who appeared unaware of the outcome of the Saturday night

MIGHT MERGE INTO BIG ONE

Four Large Insurance Companies May Unite Into One Vast Trust Concern.

CAUSE OF FIGHT IN THE EQUITABLE

Harriman And Morgan Interests Are Said To Have Precipitated The Trouble In Order To Secure Funds.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE]

Pittsburg, Pa., June 5.—H. C. Frick arrived here Saturday night and spent Sunday at his home. He denied himself to visitors and sent word that he was busy with affairs in which he could not be disturbed. A story is current here that there is a very strong possibility in the not remote future of a merger of the Equitable and with the New York Life, the Mutual Life and the Prudential. What a merger of such a magnitude would mean to the financial and railroad interests in the country it is hard even to speculate upon. It would mean a corporation with assets of over $1,500,000,000.

It would mean a corporation with a cash surplus of over $200,000,000 and with a cash income of more than $300,000,000 annually. It is to be initiated an open secret that the Equitable fight is nothing more nor less than a fight between the Harriman, Rockefeller and Schiff interests on the one hand and the J. P. Morgan, James J. Hill, Vanderbilt and Pennsylvania interests on the other. These same forces were lined up in opposition to each other at the time the Northern Pacific wound was created four years ago, and that wound, so far as these factions are personally concerned, has never healed.

Railroad Affiliations.

Back of Hyde is the Harriman interest and Alexander is being backed by Morgan and his associates. Harriman, through Hyde, was rapidly becoming the dominant factor in the Equitable and with such immense resources as the assets of this company gave him he had a most formidable weapon to assist in the control of the railroad interests of the country. It is declared that Morgan, through Alexander, endeavored to put an estoppel on him. Each party wishes control of the company and then will follow, it is said, the proposed merger previously referred to.

E. A. Wood, the local manager of the Equitable company, admitted that all insurance companies were being hard hit at present in this field, but he hesitated to connect it with the controversy going on among the Equitable directors. He also admitted that local agents have been shifting around more than usual. The agents here allege they have been offered $4 more per thousand to remain with the Equitable to write insurance, but Mr. Wood said he did not know of any such offer.

It would mean a corporation with a cash surplus of over $200,000,000 and with a cash income of more than $300,000,000 annually. It is to be initiated an open secret that the Equitable fight is nothing more nor less than a fight between the Harriman, Rockefeller and Schiff interests on the one hand and the J. P. Morgan, James J. Hill, Vanderbilt and Pennsylvania interests on the other. These same forces were lined up in opposition to each other at the time the Northern Pacific wound was created four years ago, and that wound, so far as these factions are personally concerned, has never healed.

New York, June 5.—The trial of Lawyer Abraham Hummel, charged with conspiracy and subordination of perjury, in connection with the famous Dodge-Morse matrimonial tangle, began here today before Judge Davy. Former Justice Fursman and Benjamin Heinhardt were also placed on the trial in this connection. The case promises to be replete with sensations. Mr. Hummel is one of the best-known lawyers in the United States, especially among theatrical people. The Dodge-Morse divorce-marrage case has attracted worldwide attention because of the social and financial prominence of those connected with it. It was claimed that Mr. Chas. W. Morse, the ice king and banker, married Mrs. Dodge, after she had secured a divorce through perjury, and that the marriage was not legal. It was afterward alleged that Mr. Hummel, Judge Fursman and others committed perjury in connection with the evidence presented in the fight.

WONDERFUL FEAT OF MAN TOTALLY BLIND

Former Student of State Institution is One of Oshkosh's Saddle & Horse Riders.

The Oshkosh Northwestern has the following to say about Dr. A. O. Anderson, a former student at the state institution for the blind in this city, who is doing wonderful things in the way of stepping forth from the beaten paths of the usual blind people:

After learning to play cards, ride a bicycle, and do sundry other things, Dr. A. O. Anderson, a blind masseur who has astonished Oshkosh citizens by his ability to move about unassisted, although totally blind, has added another form of recreation to his already extended list. Recently he purchased a handsome gray saddle horse and during the early hours of the evening and late in the afternoon Dr. Anderson is seen riding the animal about the streets, with almost as much assurance as a person possessed of good eyesight. He was one of the aides in the Memorial day parade. While the doctor has some slight difficulty in guiding the animal, he is rapidly overcoming it, and the horse moves along the streets in much the same manner as if guided by a person having his full faculty. The horse seems to be possessed of the ability to guide itself to a great extent, the doctor relying a great deal on the horse's knowledge of the roadway. Dr. Anderson states that he takes great pleasure in horseback riding, as it was one of his favorite recreations when a boy.

Dr. Anderson recently discarded his cane and now walks along the streets with fast strides and perfect assurance. He also plays cards, having a deck of his own by which he can tell the spots by feeling of raised dots at the corners. For a time he rode a bicycle of the tandem arrangement and took particular delight in speeding along the streets with some one on the front seat to guide the machine.

Dancing is a favorite pastime with the doctor and last winter he was in attendance at numerous parties and seemed to enjoy the privilege of gilding about the hall just as much as any other person.

Dr. Anderson, by what might properly be called his marvelous feats, considering his total blindness, probably has no equal in this part of the state, or, in fact, the whole state. Not being able to even perceive one ray of light, he has never met with any serious accidents.

FASHION NOTES.

Some of the daintiest of French fashions seen these days are those dispensed at the Antenni and other races. Checked materials seem the favorites for the majority of gowns witnessed at the races are of this design. The couturiers have found out, or rather decided that they are dressing in the soft materials such as voile égantine, etc., and as a result the shepherd plaids and heavier fabrics are limited to the strictly toiled models.

Checks and plaids are so fashion able that they are seen in all of the ultra-smart summer fabrics. Especially chic is a checked chiffon, with green the predominating tone of the color scheme. It is crossed with pale blue and cream with just a hairline of vieux rose. All of the bright, clear shades of green are prominent both in frocks and millinery this season, and many new shades are shown, differing from the old favorites only enough to justify the claim of their newness.

The checked frock in question has a full skirt, gored about the waist line and trimmed with large ruffles, above which are two tiny ruffles of knife plaited green silk. The bodice has ruffles of embroidery crossing at the front, bretelle fashion and meeting a high girdle of silk. The vest is of guaze, embroidered and inset with lace, while the sleeves are arranged in three puffs which reach to the elbow and are met with a deep close-fitting cuff of all-over embroidery trimmed with lace ruffles.

Less expensive and equally as pretty as the plaid mulls and other silky diaphanous materials are the Irish lawns figured in the same way. These are made with perfectly plain skirts, save for groups of ruffles, and have simple surplice bodices, the surplice sometimes being of lace ruffles and again of embroidery opening over a vest of plain white tucked organza.

With these frocks are worn the most charming hats, the Leghorns being among the revived favorites. More and more does one see these elegant soft straws, turned up at the side or back in the most piquante fashion and adorned with the loveliest of flowers and ribbon rosettes. There are also exquisite designs drooping front and back, but tilted forward and trimmed with roses and liberty satin in the same shade. Of course at the mention of roses one naturally thinks of the rich American beauty for it is unquestionable the most fashionable flower of the season. Pink, white and yellow blooms, however, enjoy flattering favor, and afford a change from the luxurious red of the American beauty.

Some charming coat dresses are seen in the thin plaid materials. Your correspondent has in mind particularly a voile affair in pale grey marked off in an irregular diamond design of dull green and wedgewood.

DO YOU SMOKE?

Smith Drug Co. Recommends Chicos, the Cigar that Please.

Nothing gives a smoker more pleasure than a good cigar, such as Wadsworth Bros' Chicos that Smith Drug Co. are recommending so strongly.

While the Chicos costs 5c, yet it is made from the same quality of tobacco, with a long Havana filler, as any 10c cigar on the market. It comes direct to Smith Drug Co. from the manufacturers, thus saving all jobbers' profits. Smith Drug Co. want all lovers of a good smoke to try the Chicos. Begin blue. The coat was close-fitting with ruffles of heavy white lace starting at the top of the half-circle arranged only at the front. At this point the ruffles were very narrow, but as they approached the shoulders, they widened until they reached the proportions of square sailor color, then the lace was bordered with a band of rich green and blue embroidered silk braid. Below the waistline, each gore of the coat was seamed separately and bound with the braid.

The skirt was made plain except for a deep graduated flounce of thread lace, just on under a heading of insertion to match the lace of the ruffles. At the waist it was gathered, rather full all around the figure, a treatment not calculated to look well on stout figures, but this could easily be changed to small plait, stitched down on either side.

Many of the skirts of smart summer gowns have petticoat effects in lace flounces, pointing downward slightly in the middle and a deep lace flounce. In contradistinction to the skirts swathed in lace, shirtings and such flabubus, are charming designs fitted close about the hips and ample about the bottom. Skirts with only a deep tuck or flat batiste of lace as a trimming are extremely smart and one of the newest vagaries is to finish the bottom of thin skirts with a fold of panne velvet. This affords a touch of resistance to the graceful flare of fluffy fabrics that is indescribable in its effect.

TOBACCO TALK FOR THE WEED GROWERS

Shipments Out of Storage for the Past Week Were Five Hundred Cases.

Trading from first hands continues to receive about the same attention as for several weeks past, except the aggregate business is all the time declining, though the growing districts are all the time being hunted over. A few recent transactions coming to notice are: Ole Gunderson, 20cs at 26c; O. N. Lurasas, 28cs at 26c; Nick Anderson, 26cs at 24c and 2c; Chas. Carrier, 7s at 5 and 2c. A Jenson & Sons have received about 80cs of 50s growers; 26cs of 1901-02 crop was sold by O. N. Lurasas to O. K. Roe at 10c. Old leaf is traded in moderately by packers, though the low grade goods have the stronger call. The Silverthorne packer of 1901 of 25cs is reported sold to the American Tobacco Co. Wet weather has delayed the preparation of the tobacco fields somewhat, but a commencement of transplanting will be started this coming week. Ten days of good weather is needed to bring the great bulk of plants up to standard size for setting. They are in abundance and ought to be ready by the time the average grower has his fields in condition. The shipments of storage reach 500cs from this market to all points for the week past.

OF RIBBON, ROSES AND A SHADED PLUME

The hat that is fashioned entirely of ribbons is tremendously fashionable. The one illustrated shows a frame covered with a raspberry tinted straw, and on top of this little crush roses in several shades of the same colored ribbon are sewn, these covering the straw, except for occasional gimpes. The edge of the brim is bound with velvet of a deeper tint, and the under brim faced with framboise chiffon is banded at intervals with velvet folds. The shape is one of the recent successors to the long popular shepherdess, the crown fitting comfortably to the head, and the brim showing a graceful, though slight dip in the front. Two long plumes, shading from the faintest pink to the deepest raspberry tone, are posed in the back, the quill ends being thrust through the roses on the crown and then falling flat over the brim to the hair behind.

Letter to Mr. J. P. Baker, Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir: You are the agent for Devee lead and zinc for your town and country.

The whole doctrine of it turns on these three points:

(1) It is all paint and true paint;

(2) It is the strongest paint;

(3) It is full measure.

Because it is all paint, true paint, proportioned for strength and full measure,

(1) It takes least for a job;

(2) Looks best all the time;

(3) Lasts longest;

(4) Gathers the trade, and holds customers.

There is no such argument for any other paint; there is no other such paint; there is nothing but talk for any other paint. Devee is the paint, if you want the facts on your side.

The country is full of experiences; we bring these experiences to bear on your trade. Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & CO.

LIFE INSURANCE.
Internal strife, prompted by jealousy and ambition, was the cause of the recent rupture in the management of the old and reliable Equitable Life Insurance Company and it has resulted in a general discussion of this class of business all along the line.

It is safe to say that life insurance will lose nothing by publicity and the people will have a better understanding of the depositories which they patronize so liberally.

From statistics recently compiled by the Wall Street Journal it appears that 25,000,000 people, nearly one-third of the population, are policy holders.

This simple fact speaks volumes not only for the thrift of the American people, but for their ability and disposition to earn a surplus and deposit it in safe hands for the benefit of loved ones who may survive them.

These 25 million people have on deposit with life insurance companies $2,500,000,000, a sum equivalent to two and one-half per cent of the total wealth of the nation. They deposited last year $600,000,000, which proves in most emphatic terms that people who are so disposed can not only live well in this country, but can also lay by a competency, if so desired.

These figures should be an object lesson to a large element of disgruntled people who infest the body politic and who are just now clamoring for the equal distribution of wealth.

Every policy holder, as well as every savings bank depositor—and there are more than 6,000,000 of this latter class—is a capitalist. He is neither an agitator, walking delegate, nor socialist, because he belongs to the ranks of intelligent and industrious American citizens, who appreciate the fact that they live in the best country under the sun, and in the century noted for great opportunities.

The question of life insurance, under the illegitimate of free discussion, is being more or less misrepresented by a certain class of writers, who either through ignorance or design, aim to befool the public mind.

These men treat the subject as though the assets of these companies was the property of officers and directors endowed with authority to invest or squander at will.

The notorious Tom Lawson has sounded the keynote, using the "Equitable" as a football, and a coterie of disciples, who believe in his omniscience, have taken up the refrain.

A wholesale charge of corruption and mismanagement is the result and its influence is most pernicious.

What are the facts in the case? Simply these: All great life insurance companies command the best talent that money will secure. Men who possess not only marked ability but common everyday honesty, combined with hard common sense.

These men are the custodians of the largest volume of trust funds in the country. They realize that every dollar of this money, and all it can earn through legitimate investment, after the expenses necessary to a great business, are deducted, is the property of the policy holders, and it is gratifying to know that these interests are so safely guarded, that intelligent complaint is seldom offered and loss never sustained.

The man who has his savings invested in life insurance is just as safe as the man who invests in land, and every day hundreds of estates are being settled where it is found that this class of property is the most available asset.

What was the matter with the Equitable? Nothing but internal strife on the part of its officers. Not a dollar of the people's money has been jeopardized for a single moment.

The funds are invested in the same class of reliable securities in which all companies invest, and but for the desire of the Lawson contingency to stir up trouble the question of legitimate security would never have been raised.

Savings banks and life insurance companies are what make the nation strong. They are more than simple depositories of money, for they encourage the habit of saving and accumulating more than all other agencies combined.

The American people believe in them and patronize them, and they will continue to do so until we become a nation noted for frugality and content.

The busiest man in the democratic party just now is William Jennings Bryan. His scheme for organizing clubs in all parts of the country is being worked industriously and according to the "Commoner" with good results. He will have a machine, in good running order long before 1908 to which the democratic band wagon will be attached. Watch his smoke.

The official paper will not be disturbed, in spite of the fact that the governor's assembly has voted to transfer the honor to the Milwaukee organ. The paper belongs in the city where the capitol is located, and the state will see to it that no change is made.

The assembly has passed a bill favoring a state printing plant. If the present administration continues in power it will be of great convenience, but the state needs a print shop about as much as it needs a dairy.

By whipping the devil around the post, the lawyers who conducted the political case for the administration, will be paid from public funds. A spade is always a spade.

Mr. Bryan finds time to congratulate La Follette in the last issue of his paper, and reminds him that his presence is badly needed in the senate. This ought to be worth something.

With a reform constitution to go with all the other reforms, Wisconsin will soon be able to retire from manufacturing and compete with Iowa on corn.

Tire out the conservative element in the senate and the governor will have free sailing for the balance of the session. This is the program and it is likely to be carried out.

The old constitution covers every point in law and equity and the demand for a new one is simply another move in the game of politics.

When the Chicago strike is settled the strikers will find themselves out and injured.

The capitol will remain at Madison.

PRESS COMMENT.

New York Herald: Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war, but you'll find them chronicled in the back pages these days.

El Paso Herald: Tom Lawson might get more and quicker action by taking his protest to a grand jury, instead of his magazine.

Chicago Chronicle: If Japan should conquer and rule Russia the amalgamation of the two languages would produce something worse than American slang in its most terrible form.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The dry goods advertisement in the daily paper is more interesting to the average woman reader than the most thrilling serial ever printed.

Exchange: One of the ingredients of smokeless gunpowder is said to be cheap whisky. And as a matter of fact there is plenty of whisky that tastes it.

Superior Telegram: It doesn't pay to be a hog. It would have been greatly to Russia's advantage if its promises to withdraw from Manchuria had been fulfilled at the time appointed.

Madison Journal: Then there is the thought that when Madison gets its new hotel, legislators who have only $500 on which to subsist for five months cannot afford to patronize it.

Chicago Record-Herald: Fashionable ladies in New York are now affecting a cunning little tip. Well, that's more innocent than a good many things they have affected during the past few seasons.

Racine News: If the men of the nation could hold a secret session it would probably eventually leak out that a very large majority entertained the same opinion as ex-President Cleveland regarding women's clubs.

Weyauwega Chronicle: When stage struck girls read that Nan Patterson was no sooner acquitted than she was engaged for the stage at $2,000 a week, they should recall the fact that she only missed electrocution by a very small margin.

Topera Journal: Since it has been demonstrated that Mr. Westinghouse's invention to do away with the disastrous consequences of railroad collisions is a success, perhaps it can be applied with equal success to the collision which will take place about November when President Roosevelt and the United States senate come together.

Exchange: Thomas A. Edison was just 17 years old when he made his first electro-mechanical invention, an automatic signaling attachment for his telegraph instrument, and it is now thirty-five years since he took out his first patent. Something of his extraordinary activity is shown by the fact that since that time over 1,000 patents have been issued in his name.

Chicago News: Admiral Togo has imparted the facts about the battle to the Mikado as follows: "That we gained a success beyond our expectation is due to the brilliant virtue of your majesty and to the protection of the spirits of your imperial ancestors and not to the action of any human being." Still, neither the mikado's brilliant virtue nor the spirits of his imperial ancestors did any of the shooting.

Racine Journal: There is not much danger of that Rhinelander chemist's invention, whereby a man can carry around a small vial containing enough material for 480 schooners of beer, becoming of general use, even if the invention be all that is claimed for it. Men will continue to congregate about the bar even though they may have a small brewery upon their person.

Whitewater Register: Judge J. V. Quarles returned from his trip to Europe last week, and on the 25th took his seat on the bench as judge of the Federal district court. No ceremony attended his assumption of his duties. His predecessor, Judge Seaman, in a few friendly words introduced him to the bar. Judge Quarles acknowledged the courtesy with a bow and the routine work of the office went on. There is no doubt that, as the years pass, he will be recognized as an ideal judge. He has all the requisites in the form of perfect rectitude of purpose, fearlessness in the performance of duty, profound learning in the law and a patient temperament.

Chicago Inter Ocean: There are people who are never happy unless they are deceived. But they are in the manifest minority. The great majority of people know perfectly well that glucose enters largely into many of the syrups, confections, preserves, jam, and jellies they use. They may not prefer glucose, but they get along with it. They know that it is not unhealthful, and, though, they might prefer sugar, they accept the glucose. It is cheaper and it serves. Now, these people are entitled to know what they are buying. They are entitled to know that when they pay for sugar they are getting sugar. That the great majority of them would buy glucose, when plainly told that it was such, just as they now buy it when they must necessarily infer from the price that it is not sugar, appears from the experience of the oleomargarine trade.

La Crosse Chronicle: What sort of people are the Japanese? According to reports the army under General Kuroki, when informed of the victory of Togo over Rojestvensky, "received the news quietly, but the deepest satisfaction prevailed." Imagine the result of a similar announcement to an American army. At the time of Dewey's victory at Manila Bay the country rang with shouts and demonstrations. Eager eyes waited for the reappearance of the great admiral on American soil, and the papers of the country, the sermons preached in the pulpits of the churches of all denominations, the addresses of all public speakers, teemed with references to the magnificent achievements of American arms. But this body of little islanders in the Pacific "received the news quietly but with the deepest satisfaction." It is evident that Japan needs some universities and colleges, with a regular system of college and national yell.

HENRY G. DETTMER
COMITS SUICIDE

Formerly Lived in Janesville, and Was Well Known Here—Brother and Mother Reside in City.

Henry G. Dettmer, who formerly lived in this city and whose brother, W. F. Dettmer, and mother reside in this city, suicided at Madison some time during Saturday night or Sunday morning. He ended his life by shooting himself in the head in a room in the Elver hotel and the body was not discovered until last evening. Suspicions were aroused by his absence on Sunday and the fact that response to calls could not be received from the locked room, and the door was forced. The remains were found lying on the floor. Mr. Dettmer has worked in the Western Union telegraph office in this city, in Madison during the legislative sessions of 1903, and Saturday returned from Seattle, Washington, where he had worked for one of the coast roads. He was forced to relinquish his position in the west on account of poor health. He was one of the best-known telegraph operators in the state. He leaves besides a brother and mother, a wife, who resides at Fargo, Dakota. The remains were brought to this city this afternoon at three o'clock and taken to the chapel in Oak Hill cemetery, where services were held, Rev. J. H. Tippett officiating. The pallbearers were George Schaller, Herman Hunt, Henry Gaule and Charles B. Wisch.

Japan's control of the sea, resulting from the recent naval engagement with Russia, is a guarantee of safety to the residents of the island empire. Mrs. C. V. Hibbard of this city, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lowell, called her husband at Wiju, Manchuria, on Friday that she would leave this country in August, expecting to meet him in Tokio on Sept. 1. A Japanese nurse who has been secured in this country will accompany Mrs. Hibbard and her children.

An English writer tells of a Kentish farm worker whose horny hand he grasped. "Good Kent dirt," said the man, catching a critical glance. ## MUCH DAMAGE IN WHOLE COUNTRY

STORM SUNDAY MORNING DID $60,000 DAMAGE.

BARNs AND TREES DOWN

City Streets Were Badly Washed and Gardens Ruined—Hail and Wind.

Janesville and Rock county was visited with one of the heaviest rain storms that has occurred in years early Sunday morning. In fact there seemed to be three storms following each other so closely that there was but a few minutes' cessation between each. Reports from throughout the country show that the damage by washing was very large and it is roughly estimated that fifty thousand dollars will not cover the loss to growers. So furious was the storm that huge ditches were washed out on all the side hills of the city, and all along South Main street, Park Place, on both sides of the park, south second street and so on down were badly washed, the street car tracks in many places being partially covered with sand and gravel. The worst washout appears to have been on East Milwaukee street. Here the gutter was jammed by stones left for curbing and the flood was forced to seek a way towards the river and over-flowed taking with it sand and gravel. The stairway into the Wisch barber shop in the basement of the Hayes block had a foot and a half of sand and the floor of the shop was covered to a depth of an inch with water.

Carelessness

Many of the overflows were due to the careless piling of obstructions in the gutters which completely blocked the water and drains and forced the flood to seek new channels. Persons whose property was injured have excellent grounds against the street department for the slack manner in which they were cared for. It will take several days work to clear the drains along South Main street out and in other portions of the city where sand and gravel completely choked them. Farmers driving into town from the east and west state that the roads are badly washed in these two directions. Bass Creek more resembled a huge lake than a mild little stream yesterday and Sugar river and even the Rock raged for a time in caring for the extra fluid that was poured down with warning.

Crops Washed.

Reports from all parts of the country show that the uplands were badly washed and the low strips where tobacco and corn and sugar beets were planted were badly washed and the loss will be very heavy. Huge sugar beet fields were reported as under water up to noon yesterday and in many localities the truck gardens were reported almost entirely ruined. The only fields that escaped real damage were the pastures and these in many localities were badly washed. The lightning was intense and a heavy hail storm showered down hall stones as large as walnuts for several minutes. Heavy wind accompanied the second storm and in the city several trees were partly denuded of branches and small sheds on the outskirts were blown down.

Heavy Losses

The heaviest loss by wind occurred south of the city on the Haviland farm. Here the wind blew down a new stock barn killing three cows and wrecking farm machinery and damaging other cattle. A peculiar feature of this accident was that the new barn stood between an old barn and a tobacco shed, neither of which were injured while the stock barn was so much of a wreck that farmers in the neighborhood were called on to help raise the heavy beams and liberate the cattle which were imprisoned in the ruins. The loss on this farm is estimated at eight hundred dollars which was covered by tornado insurance. On the John Fanning farm the roof of the tobacco shed was blown off and other damage done and Reed's farm a large pig pen and a small house were wrecked.

Throughout State

Reports from throughout the state this morning announce that the same storm did considerable damage at Waupaca, Racine and Jefferson. One farmer was killed by lightning near Waupaca and two seriously injured. Buildings were destroyed by wind and at Racine the car-barns were being set by lightning. At Jefferson lightning struck the courthouse and did other damage.

Tornado at Beers' Farm

At the Lee Beers farm on the old Black Bridge road a six-acre tobacco shed was literally torn into kindling wood by the storm and there is scarcely a timber two feet high standing upright in the wreckage. The owners are certain that it was hit by a tornado. Considerable farm machinery was damaged and the whole loss will total over $800. This was tornado insurance on the building.

Lightning Struck Shed

When Dr. G. H. Webster passed a farm about five miles north of the city on the Milton road yesterday he noticed a number of men at work trying to quench the flames that were destroying a shed and had spread to neighboring strawstacks. He learned that the shed had been struck by lightning.

Windmill Destroyed

On Elmer Langworthy's farm near Indian Ford a windmill was blown over and a tobacco-shed was wrecked on Michael Connors' farm in the same neighborhood. A number of large shade trees in front of the latter place were blown down.

DAUGHTER OF SCOFIELD'S COW IS NOT AFFLICTED

Did Not Respond to the Test for Tuberculosis Applied at Oconto.

State Veterinarian E. D. Roberts has received word from D. J. Hellum of Oconto to the effect that the tubercular test applied to the daughter of Ex-Gov. Scofield's famous cow produced no reaction and that the suspected animal was free from the disease.

NOTICE TO THE BEET GROWERS

We wish to advise all growers to cultivate their fields thoroughly at once. With the exception of the fields that have been washed out or covered heavy with the washed dirt, the heavy rain will not damage any if the cultivator is started now. This is just the time that decides whether you are to have a beet crop to harvest or not and unless the ground is thoroughly worked immediately to stop the surface sand from blowing and to destroy the crust and weeds the crop will be greatly damaged. Those needing seed for replanting should call for it at once, as only 10 days of the regular planting season yet remains.

ROCK COUNTY SUGAR CO.

TERrible STORM IN THREE DAYS

Is Predicted by Ex Sheriff George Appleby—"Get into Cellars."

George Appleby, ex-sheriff of Rock county, advises everybody to get into his cyclone cellar or build a strong hold as good as that of Outlaw Dietz. "If you have any friends hereabouts, get ready to pray for them," he said this afternoon. "Within three days Janesville is going to have a taste of one of the biggest storms on record, or I miss my guess. I was out in the one Sunday morning. It was not a rainstorm. The bottom just dropped out of the sky." While the hills roundabout are calculated to break up any ordinary cyclone, it is by no means certain that they will be able to head off the George Appleby specimen.

SUICIDE LEFT AN UNPLEASANT NOTE

For Young Woman Who Recently Spent Several Weeks in Janesville—Chicago Tragedy.

Arthur H. Vivian, aged 38 years, a traveling salesman for the Chas. T. Wittstein jewelry firm in Chicago, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas in Schaeffer's hotel, 965 North Clark street, on Saturday. He had previously written a letter to the police instructing them that they would find his body near the Douglas monument in Lincoln Park. As there is no such monument the matter was considered a hoax. In the man's effects was found a missive to Vivian dated Janesville, Wis., and written on stationery with the heading, "Office of Everett & Edwards, Stocks and Bonds." It was from Miss Ruth Everett, a sister of the broker, who spent several weeks here recently. The suicide left this note for her, addressed to her Chicago place of residence:

LONG, USEFUL LIFE ENDS TODAY

HON. SETH FISHER PASSES AWAY EARLY THIS MORNING.

MOURNED BY MANY FRIENDS

A Pioneer Settler of Rock County Identified in Its Growth and Prosperity.

Shortly before seven o'clock this morning Hon. Seth Fisher, one of the pioneers of Rock county, passed away at his home, 203 North Jackson street. Mr. Fisher had been in failing health for the past few weeks, but had not been confined to his bed. He passed away peacefully surrounded by his family. Heart trouble was the direct cause of his death and despite the efforts of physicians summoned he passed into the world beyond. The news of his death will be learned with sorrow by his many friends in the city and county.

Born in Ohio

Mr. Fisher was born at Fairfield, Columbiana county, Ohio, on the 21st day of September, 1820, and was 80 years of age at the time of his death. His great-grandfather was born in the north of England, emigrating to this country in the early days of its history, settling in the state of Virginia and later moving to Pennsylvania and Ohio. His father, Dr. Sylvanus Fisher, resided for many years in Green and Rock counties and was a well-known physician in the early days of the state.

Lived in Ohio

Mr. Fisher, in his youth resided upon the farm of his uncle in Ohio and in the graded schools of that state received a liberal education. When 18 years of age, in 1842, he emigrated to the west and located at Galena, Illinois, where he worked in the mines for four years. At the expiration of that time he came to Rock county, locating in the town of Center, where he entered land from the government and engaged in the occupation of farming. In 1890 he moved to this city, where he has since resided.

Prominent in Politics

After his arrival in the country in 1840 Mr. Fisher erected a little log cabin upon his land, in which for several years he lived in true pioneer style. With his own hands he broke the land of his first claim and the work of cultivation and improvement then begun was afterwards steadily carried forward. He owned the first threshing-machine in the township and had his first reaper all the distance from Chicago. Mr. Fisher extended the boundaries of his farm until at one time it comprised six hundred acres of fine land, a large portion of which was owned by him at the time of his death. Mr. Fisher was known throughout the state as a successful and prominent agriculturist and breeder of livestock.

Prominent in Politics

In political affairs Mr. Fisher took a prominent part, being a supporter of the republican party. For number of years he was chairman of the board of supervisors of Rock county and served one term in the Wisconsin legislature. For several years he was president of the Rock County Agricultural society and vice-president of the State Agricultural society. He held other official positions and discharged his duties with promptness and fidelity.

In Public Affairs

Throughout his lifetime he was a man of public spirit and identified himself with the welfare and growth of his township, county and state. He was at all times deeply interested in public matters and when called upon freely gave his best efforts in their behalf. In public as in private life Mr. Fisher was known as a man of ability and strong character.

Married in 1848

In 1848 Mr. Fisher was married to Miss Mary Ann Crow, who passed to the world beyond in 1890. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, four of whom—William, John and Harvey and a daughter—died in youth and middle age. Two sons—Abel L. Fisher and Grant U. Fisher—and two daughters—Jennie Fisher and Mrs. Ann Noris—are left to mourn his loss.

Funeral to be Held

The funeral will be held on Wednesday at two o'clock p.m. at his late residence on North Jackson street, and from the Disciple church in the town of Center at 4:30 o'clock. The interment will be at the Center cemetery.

History of An Official Baseball

Rubber Core, Cement, Hundreds of Yards of Wool Yarn and Two Covers Used In Manufacture---How Spheres Are Made.

This is the story of a baseball: It begins with a rubber core. Then it extends through hundreds of yards of wool yarn to a horsehide cover. More hundreds of yards of wool yarn give the resiliency, or "bounce." Then come cement and an outside cover.

THE EARLY STAGES OF BASEBALL DURING MANUFACTURE.

within the prescribed weight and circumference laid down by the league regulations.

If some of the old yarn balls made by mothers and grandfathers had been preserved, they would be priceless to-day as relics. Those balls were "swatted" out of shape in the twinkling of an eye.

Then a kid cover was sewed over the yarn ball. It was cut in eighths of a circle, just as an orange skin is divided. This was promptly knocked off in the second inning, but it gave a third tuning for the yarn.

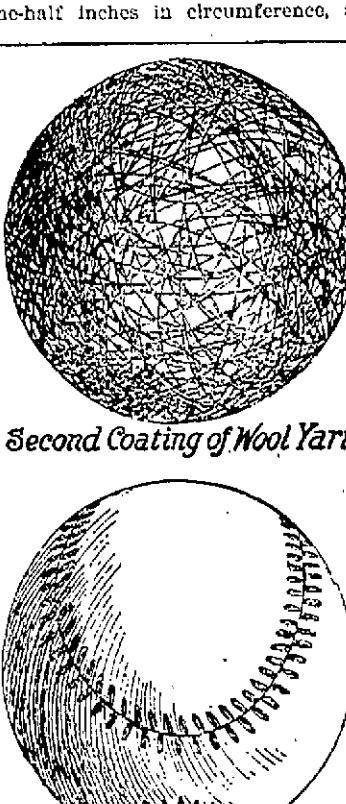

To appreciate the mechanical part of modern ball manufacture it must be understood that the ironclad rules of both the American and National league clubs call for a ball—

"Not under five ounces or over five and one-quarter ounces in weight.

"Not under nine inches in circumference or over nine and a quarter inches. These limits are arbitrary.

To meet them a rubber core that is molded and weighs but one ounce is used in New England, Philadelphia and Cincinnati. This rubber core is wound with a specially spun wool yarn. This yarn has a strength that will permit of the use of machinery that is kept under "lock and key." In short, a weak thread in the winding means the loss of core and body up to the point where the break occurs. There is no knotting to overcome defects.

When the ball has reached four and one-half inches in circumference, ac-ording to the gage, it goes to the first cover of horsehide.

Then it comes back to be rewound to eight and nine-tenths inches.

Back it goes again to the cement room—that is, the "holy of holies" of the ball shop.

Next the ball is seasoned—that is, "dried out." It must fit a box square to the dimensions of the standard.

Waddell's Advice to Pitchers

"Take Good Care of Yourself, Always Use Fast Ball, Study Batsmen Closely and Keep Cool When Delivery Is Hit Freely."

BY GEORGE EDWARD ("RUBE") WADDELL.

Star pitcher of Philadelphia Americans (or Athletics), who once struck out sixteen men in a single game.

Much of the success which I have attained as a pitcher is due to the good care which I have taken of myself, especially my arm, in my ten years, before the batsman. Long practice in teaching the art, and after several bouts, McCoy is loud in praises of Gotch. If he develops sufficient ability and defeats the second rater, Jeffries will probably come out of the hole in the ground into which he has crept in disgust and meet Gotch. Having no faith in Marwin Hart's ability, Jeffries admits that Gotch is the only man in sight at present who can make him reconsider his retirement.

Wrestling sharps are surprised at Gotch's recent defeat by Jenkins. It was believed that the Iowan's youth and strength would prove superior to the champion's well known cleverness. Jenkins outgeneraled Gotch. The former's methods, such as creeping off the mat and holding deliberately on to the ropes, while not in accordance with the dictates and usages of good sportsmanship, were nevertheless allowed by Referee Tim Hurst. Hurst was certainly very liberal to Jenkins. It is doubtful if any other official would have permitted Jenkins to persist in such tactics. The blame cannot be placed on Jenkins. He was entitled to do anything that the referee would allow. Either Hurst has not a comprehensive grasp of wrestling regulations or he failed to keep entirely awake during the match.

Jabez White, the British champion, went down to defeat in one of the most sensational international battles ever fought, but better things are expected of his little prototype, Owen Moran, who is also here and inspires mastering the different assortment of balls used by the leading pitchers of the country. In my early experience in the league he has trained my eye and arm so that it seems comparatively easy to pitch a fine hitting game now.

My best ball is a fast inshoot which breaks when close to the batsman and is very hard to judge. If all young pitchers would use a fast ball they would find it much easier on the arm.

In order to make the fast ball effective it is necessary to conceal the delivery motion. A pitcher alternating with the fast and slow ball will gradually acquire an identical motion, which deceives the batsman as to the speed of the incoming pellet and makes either more effective.

The spit ball is the sensation of the game at present, but I hardly believe that it will last.

Of course all of us use it occasionally, but not extensively. It is a remarkably effective ball when controlled, requires a lot of practice to get it in shape and a pitcher may be liable with the ball one day and the next be batted all over the lot.

You see, that pesky thing won't break the same way every day it is pitched. If it was a reliable ball that could be depended upon every day in the week it would be but a short time until the other curves fell largely into disuse.

But the innovation curve is not substantial, and I think that it will run its race before long.

A pitcher's efficiency may largely be increased by a close study of the batsman. If you notice that the batsman is standing in close it is a good principle to keep the ball in close and let it run speedy. An out-curve aimed for to win American championship honors by beating Frankie Neil, the bantam champion.

Moran has made good showing in his bouts thus far in this country. It was Jim Bowker who beat Neil last summer in England for the world's title, but so good a judge of fighters as George Weedon, who has travelled abroad with Young Corbett, Tom Jenkins, the wrestler, and many other ring celebrities, says Bowker is not as "classy" a man among the bantams as little Moran.

"I saw both of them fight when I was in England, and if I were going to back either one in a match I'd pick Moran. Bowker is a good boy, but Moran I like better. Moran is an awful nice little fellow. He is just such sort of a chap as Jabez White, who, by the way, is well liked at home."

Weedon saw Neil fight Bowker and lost a bet on the result. He mentioned that Neil looked to be an easy winner in the first three rounds, but after that Frankie only covered up and permitted Bowker to do all the leading. Weedon thought that Neil lost through not being accustomed. "Frankie told me when I visited him at his training quarters before the fight that he wasn't feeling any too well," said Weedon, "but looked upon Bowker as such an easy job that he fought him out of condition."

Wrestling Fighting.

Wrestler Frank Gotch Learning to Box at Shrine of McCoy.

Frank Gotch, the Iowa wrestler who was defeated in his last two championship bouts with Tom Jenkins, has definitely decided to enter the prize ring.

Gotch, who is built like the ancient Roman gladiator, recently announced that he believed he could, with proper training, defeat Champion Jim Jeffries. Many fight followers, well aware of the Iowan's powerful muscles and splendid endurance, acknowledged that he had a good chance to win heavy-weight honors.

The ex-champion wrestler has engaged Kid McCoy to teach him the gentle knockout art, and after several bouts, McCoy is loud in praises of Gotch. If he develops sufficient ability and defeats the second rater, Jeffries will probably come out of the hole in the ground into which he has crept in disgust and meet Gotch. Having no faith in Marwin Hart's ability, Jeffries admits that Gotch is the only man in sight at present who can make him reconsider his retirement.

EIGHT-HOUR DAY FOR MINERS

John Mitchell Urges That Demand Be Made in April Next.

Scranton, Pa., June 5.—At Moosic in the first of eleven speeches to be delivered in the anthracite region, President John Mitchell, of the United Mineworkers, suggested that the eight-hour day and a signed agreement with the organization should be insisted upon by the miners when the present agreement expires on May 31, 1906. "The present agreement is the best you have ever had," said Mr. Mitchell. "but it is not good enough. We should have an agreement between the union and the operators. We should have the generally established short working day of eight hours. Whether these things will come next April or not is not for me to say; it is for you."

MYSTERY IN TRIO OF DEATHS

Two Girls and a Youth Found Shot in an Ohio Farmhouse.

Hillsboro, Ohio, June 5.—Three young persons—Madge Dines, aged 14; Nettie Hart, aged 16, and George Baldwin, aged 18—were found shot to death in an upper room in the home of Ed Dine, a farmer and the father of Madge, three miles east of the city. The girls were slain with a revolver. The man's brains were blown out with a shotgun. The latter weapon was found in the room in which the bodies lay. The coroner and the county and city authorities were immediately notified and a rigid investigation was begun.

"Yes, a woman like you describes came here about four o'clock this morning," answered, to Thomas' inquiries, the old man who kept the place. "She took a cup of coffee and a sandwich and asked me the road to Windsor Locks. A very pleasant-spoken female. She thanked me kindly through her veil when I showed her. I told her she had better sit down and rest awhile; that the streets and roads were no place for a woman at that hour. Then, if you'll believe it, she started up and ran away. She took that street toward East Hartford bridge. I had half a mind to call after her that she was going the wrong way if she wanted to get to Windsor Locks, but she was out of sight before a cat could wink, and I couldn't leave the shop. Out of her head, you tell me? Poor creature!"

The street which the reporter now followed led directly to the river and the bridge separating the busy capital from the quiet village of East Hartford.

A sudden thought as he approached the stream sent a chill to his heart. He stopped at the boat house to ask if anybody had been seen to pass during the night, but no watch had been kept. After most perplexing uncertainty for several moments, Thomas decided to cross the river and seek for developments in the little town beyond.

A milk wagon was jogging on to the accompaniment of jingling cans, as Thomas turned into the broad main street. It halted at a pleasant farm house not far from the river.

"Just back from the city?" asked Thomas of the pleasant-looking man, with sun-tanned, hairy face, as he laid the reins over the back of his well-fed bay.

"Yes, sir. It takes a goodish while to make my rounds."

"Pardon my question, but it is one of great interest and importance to me. When did you set out?"

"A little after four."

"And did you chance to meet a woman, all wrapped up in a cloak, on your way over?"

"Ah!" answered the milkman, interested at once. "I told Jim there was something queer about her. Yes, I did see her, and stopped her, too, just about where you are standing, sir."

"The poor woman is not responsible, for what she is doing," said Thomas.

"I am searching for her now."

"Ah!" the milkman snatched his lips in his eagerness. "Take her in charge, eh?"

Thomas nodded.

"Well, sir, she is as quick a traveler as I ever see, man or woman; and goodness only knows where she has got to by this time. It was so uncommon to see such a figure that I took a pretty close note of her hurrying along from the bridge, and I put myself right in the way all of a sudden on purpose. She gave a little frightened scream, and put out her hand to me appealing like. It was as white a hand as I ever see, sir; she's never had any rough work to do, I'll be bound, poor thing!"

"I'm not meaning you any harm," I says to her, while Jim, like an idiot, stood staring at her over the gate with his mouth open. But for a young woman like you to be racing along mad-like at this hour of the night, it isn't exactly the right thing, is it, miss? I put it to you frankly, you know. She clasped her hands desparingly, and said: 'You don't know! You can't know! Do not try to stop me, for mercy's sake!' But I see the poor thing was well-nigh fagged out, and I just took her arm and walked her into the kitchen, where my good woman stood quite dumfounded. 'She as a difficult sandy hill was being surmounted, Thomas' glance, taking in the broad expanse of landscape, brilliant under the rays of the westering sun, caught sight of a solitary woman's figure on a slope to the left.

The roads crossed just at the summit of the hill; and, urging his horse to the utmost, Thomas soon came within view of the figure again, this time not far away.

Did the unknown journeyer have some premonition that she was pursued? It would seem so, for she started like a hunted creature as the sound of rapidly-rolling wheels drew nearer, and ran into the thick wood that skirted one side of the road as if in desperate search of refuge.

Thomas leaped from his carriage and was at her side in an instant. His touch on her shoulder seemed to paralyze all power of motion.

She gave a stifled cry. The long cloak, already tangled in the thicket, fell to her feet. With a last vain effort to go on, she staggered and reeled.

As she fell, fainting and worn, in his arms, the veil that had concealed her features for so many a weary hour became freed from its fastenings and drifted away.

"Good heavens!" Thomas almost gave way himself in the shock of discovery and the following revulsion of feeling.

"Stella North!"

CHAPTER XI.

IN DANGER.

Reporter Thomas had no time to construct theories to account for what had happened. For whatever reason, Stella North was the woman he had unwittingly followed, and Stella North was the woman who now lay in his arms, as devoid of life, to all appearances, as the twigs upon which her dainty feet were dragging. He looked into her face for the moment with helpless irresolution. The dictates of common humanity would have impelled him to pity her, but it was no ordinary pity that filled his soul on this occasion. He had been aware ever since the day she flashed upon him that appealing glance as her sister was leading her from the room at Swampscott, of a peculiar interest more romantic and tender, perhaps, than he as a matter-of-fact man was free to admit to himself.

But the present emergency demanded prompt action. He could see plainly enough that it was not merely faint that had caused her to lose consciousness. Nature had bestowed upon her a face charming in its natural roundness of outline and ready, always to break into dimpled smiles; but, alas! horror and deprivation of sleep and food had wrought a wicked change in a few days.

As she lay with her head thrown back, her lips parted, her eyes closed, her hair strayed recklessly about her temples, she looked as if she had just died after a painful illness. Thomas hastened with her out of the sight of possible curiosity. A few steps brought him deep enough into a protecting wood that fringed the roadside, and here, in the leaves, beneath the trees where the birds were singing, he laid her gently down. His experience in the art of restoring fainting women to consciousness had been extremely limited; but he believed in the effectiveness of alcohol, and always carried when traveling for use in an emergency a flask of brandy. A little of this strong remedy poured down her throat half strangled the victim, but it awoke her. Her eyes opened and she regarded him languidly. He had seen a dying bird look just that way.

"Come, Miss North, you feel better now, don't you?" he said, awkwardly, as he supported her head upon his arm. And when a sudden betrayal of fear and shame surged into her white cheeks he hastened to add: "There now, there's nothing to be afraid of. Not the least in the world."

She made an effort to disengage herself and to arise, but she was very weak, and she only sank back again with a pathetic sigh. The stars came into her eyes at once, and she was unable to conceal her weakness or to check it. Faster and faster they chased each other down her cheeks. Her face was wet with them.

"Come, Miss North," he murmured, "this will never do. You must give way like this. Don't despair. If there is anything wrong, you may depend upon me to help you all I can."

"Oh, it's not I who need the help," she moaned, quite light-headed by reason of her long sufferings; and, grasping his sleeve with her little hand, she exclaimed with sudden, passionate intensity: "Oh, don't let them hang her. Marion never could have done it in her right mind. She was out of her head, you know. You are sure she was, are you not?"

This unexpected entreaty was a surprise, but it was a most welcome one to Thomas. He had not had an opportunity for deliberate thought since he had recognized who it was that had thrown away the compromising weapon with the suspicious smudge upon it and fled from the Northville in the most damaging of circumstances; but in a vague, general way, his heart had been conscious of the weight of the accepted theory that she was in some way implicated in the dark work of the tragedy. And now these wild, hysterical words, delivered under the pressure of her overstrung emotions, gave him more than a hope that she was innocent of any part in the hideous crime.

The thought clouded his breast. He looked at his watch. It was getting late. Unless he proposed to turn her over to the police, in truth, time pressed.

"Ahem!" he exclaimed. "Miss North!"

But her sleep was too deep to be disturbed by such an expedient. He placed his hand gently upon her shoulder, and a thrill ran through him at the contact. She started up and stared wildly at him. Gradually the truth came to her. She awoke from a happy oblivion to the horror of the past few days. The sudden frightened look in her face proclaimed this fact. And then her eyes wandered from the reporter's face to the collation spread at her feet.

"For me!" she exclaimed. "Oh!"

But nothing but tears bespoke her thanks. She was evidently ashamed to betray herself so; but she was too weak to prevent it. She covered her face with her hands and sank down at the foot of the tree.

"You think me foolish, I know," she stammered.

"Not a bit of it," said Thomas. "I think your nerves are quite unstrung, because you haven't taken nourishment enough. Eat something, Miss North. I beg of you; and, my word for it, you'll feel better."

By dint of much persuasion and adroit management he reassured her, so that she actually smiled the very ghost of a smile, but it betrayed the presence of a merry dimple in her cheek, which Thomas thought quite charming.

"How can I thank you?" she murmured.

"By eating all you can," he returned.

And she did endeavor to show her gratitude in that way. From time to time she looked at him with a glance of dread and apprehension.

"You are not afraid of me, Miss North?" he said at last, pleasantly. He was smiling now, as he sat on a rock near by watching her eat, which she did with that ravenous appetite that comes of absolute starvation.

"Excuse me," she said, after an evident effort, "but you are the same gentleman who called at our house—who used to know my father!"

Thomas was off at an energetic pace. He first lit his horse to a tree, and then ran on to the nearest farm house. A well-to-do-looking woman, with a sunny face, appeared at the door in answer to his knock.

"Madam," said Thomas, hastily, "I have to apologize for my unexpected call, but the fact is, I am in great need of food—the best you have and plenty of it. I'll pay—anything. Only let me have it at once."

"But I can't," said the woman; "I haven't a thing in the house to eat!"

"But I must have something," exclaimed Thomas; "if it's nothing but milk and water. The case is very urgent. Here, do what you can for me."

He thrust a five-dollar bill into the good woman's hand. She thrust it back promptly.

"Here, I don't want your money," she said, rather stiffly. "Such as I have you're welcome to. Come in."

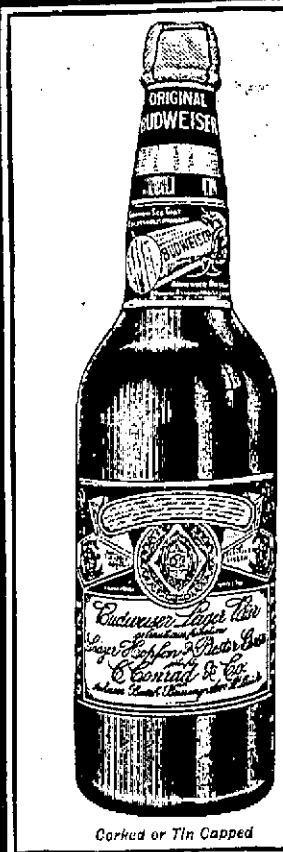

She led the astonished Thomas into an ample pantry, which was in a condition of neatness that was almost painful. But it needed no power of divination to determine that it was the pride of the good woman's life, and the shelves fairly groaned with good things. Thomas was dumb with delighted amazement.

"Well," said the housewife, evidently enjoying the condition of stupefaction to which he had reduced him, "do you see anything you'd like? If so, you are welcome."

"The—the fact is," stammered Thomas, "I wish you'd let me pay for it. I—I see, I might carry away a little more than I'd like to; for the fact is I've got a friend just back here in the woods, and she—he's starving to death."

The woman laughed outright. Of course, she did not believe that anybody was dying for the want of food in this land of plenty. The best Thomas could do was to effect a compromise. The woman accepted a dollar for the heathen. Thomas took away all he could well carry.

But the present emergency demanded prompt action. He could see plainly enough that it was not merely faint that had caused her to lose consciousness. Nature had bestowed upon her a face charming in its natural roundness of outline and ready, always
